

DOCTORAL COLLEGE #OrganizingtheDigital

Relations, Publics, Societies

Our Aim

The digital permeates micro, meso, and macro level phenomena in contemporary societies. The unique contribution of the doctoral college and its grounding in organization theory, media and communications studies, consumer culture theory, labor market and general management theories is its potential to bridge and transcend these levels of analysis. Consequently, our emphasis on digital relations, digital publics, and digital societies represents exactly such a transversal perspective on digital dynamics.

Methodologically, the doctoral college builds on multi-method approaches and advances conceptual research, experimental, qualitative and interpretive studies, quantifications and network analyses of digital texts, visual methodologies, and behavioral patterns of digital relations, publics, and societies.
