Performance & Discussion

All I wanted to say

'All I wanted to say' is a multidisciplinary journey through theatre, dance, poetry, film, digital art, and music that explores both how we choose to communicate in the Digital Era and how these modes have transformed through time. A close look at the poetry, letters, text messages, and emails we all send can reveal how much remains untold.

'All I wanted to say' presents a reflection on technology's major role in how, when, and what we say. Through a collage investigation of new and found texts as they intersect with projection, voice-over, chat room artifacts, and performance dialogue, we seek to immerse the audience in a bath of language and image that traverses communication and poetic expression over time and genres.
