

Curriculum Vitae

Manfred Markus: personal data

Born in Hagen/Westfalia, Germany, on 15 February 1941, Austrian and German citizen, I was chairholder for English Linguistics and Medieval English Literature at the U of Innsbruck from 1981 to 2009.

I graduated in English and German studies, philosophy and pedagogy at the U of Göttingen/Germany, got my doctoral degree and "habilitation" for English at the U of Regensburg (1980), spent two terms as a student at Reading U (1962) and was Visiting Prof. at the U of Massachusetts at Amherst, Mass./USA (1974/5).

I started my career with the analysis of stylistics and narrative technique, particularly of Middle English literature. But since the mid 1970s, I have, apart from occasional work in Middle English literature, focussed on linguistics, above all historical English, phonology, contrastive and corpus linguistics, as well as the creation of new corpora. In the 1990s, I compiled the Innsbruck Middle English Prose Corpus and the Innsbruck Corpus of English Letters (1386-1698), both available on CD-ROM).

I have been married to Ingrid, née Müller, since 1968 and have two children, Dr. Dirk Markus (born in 1971) and Ronald Markus (born in 1974). I live at Innsbruck, Austria.

Conference Activity and Guest Lectures

Manfred Markus

In 1991 I (supported by Christian Mair, now Freiburg University) convened an international conference on contrastive linguistics and in 1993 a workshop on computer linguistics, both at Innsbruck. In October 2007, I was co-convenor of a workshop "Computer Studies in Lexicography" within the Österreichische Linguistiktagung at Innsbruck. I also convened an international workshop on Wright's EDD on the Fifteenth International Conference on English Historical Linguistics (ICEHL 15) Munich, 24-30 August 2008, and co-convened an international conference Middle and Modern English Corpus Linguistics: A Multi-dimensional Approach, Innsbruck 5-9 July 2009.

Furthermore, I travelled regularly to initiate Erasmus and Socrates contacts, and also to deliver papers at conferences and guest lectures.
