

Sarah Piepkorn (University of Hildesheim)

Sarah Piepkorn is a doctoral student at Hildesheim University and member of the university's doctoral programme on education research. Her doctoral project connects verbal aspect with lexicography: It aims at introducing information on verbal aspect in entries for exemplary verbs of movement in English, German and Italian in the Phrase-based Active Dictionary by collecting information on verbal aspect, developing presentational devices for aspect information in the dictionary entries and evaluating the devices with advanced foreign language learners. She holds a bachelor's and a master's degree in translation studies from Heidelberg University for the language pairs German-English and German-Italian.
