

Fritz Kliche (University of Hildesheim)

Fritz Kliche is computational linguist at the Institute of Information Science and Natural Language Processing at the University of Hildesheim since 2012. Previously, he studied linguistics, computer science and psychology in Tübingen and Stuttgart and worked for several years in the “Communication Lab” in Ulm. His main interests are cooperations in the digital humanities and in computational social sciences.